☞ CHARLES-TOWN, Printed by PETER TIMOTHY, at the Printing-Office, in BROAD-STREET.

Where Advertiſements and Subſcriptions for this Paper are taken in,—all kinds of Printing-Work done, with Accuracy and Diſpatch,—and Leaſes and Releaſes, and all other ſorts of Blanks ſold.

Mr. TIMOTHY,

AS there is a bill before the legiſlature, which is ſoon to undergo its final trial, as it is conſidered of the utmoſt importance, as it is greatly decried by one part of the province, and as ardently deſired by the other; and as it can give no offence to any particular body, or to any particular perſon, to treat the ſubject with a decent freedom, I ſhall beg leave to be indulged in that ſatisfaction, which many men enjoy in divulging their own opinions.

Although a man may not be deeply converſant in the laws of the land, yet he may be capable of giving ſuch reaſons as, perhaps, may convince the oppoſers of the bill, that it is by no means impoſſible to carry it into execution, and impracticability ſeems to be the grand objection—for every man acknowledges the want of ſuch an inſtitution, the violences that are daily committed in the back parts, and the extreme hardſhips of thoſe who have honeſty enough to be better than their neighbours.

In ſettling an infant country, the firſt ſtep moſt neceſſary, is, to lay the people under the ſalutary reſtraint of law and government, to preſerve their liberty and property, to puniſh the villainies of the profligate, and protect the innocent—theſe meaſures can only be accomplished by a proper adminiſtration of juſtice, and extending its influence to the remoteſt parts.

In a country filled with cities and villages, an inſtitution of this ſort would be leſs wanting—for wherever a number of men have aſſembled together, neceſſity obliges them to have recourſe to a ſtrict regularity, every man has a watchful eye over the conduct of his neighbour, and no crime eſcapes the puniſhment it deſerves — but where the inhabitants are ſcattered, and thinly too, over a great extent of ground, judges, like guards in a garriſon, ought to be ſent the rounds — becauſe when men are left to themſelves, they naturally become idle, of courſe vicious, and twenty or thirty hardened wretches, colleſted together, will be able to deſtroy the happineſs of many, whoſe diſtance from each other prevents all reſiſtance.

Whoever imagines the province too young for an eſtabliſhment of this ſort, whoever is apprehenſive of abuſe to the judges, affront to the lawyers, and relief to the impriſoned criminals, cannot ground his opinion upon reflexion or experience.

An infant country is more capable of receiving any impreſſion than one of a longer ſettlement—In proportion to the number of inhabitants, oppoſition, if any is offered, will be more or leſs—None can be expected here, becauſe the people to whom relief is intended, are the requeſters of it—If reſiſtance ſhould be attempted, it would be ſooner quelled at preſent, than in any time to come; becauſe a few men are eaſier kept in order than a multitude.

But the very appearance of a judge, ſurrounded with his lawyers and officers, will demand attention. The ſolemnities, attendant upon a court, will awe the people into reſpect,—the cauſe of their meeting will create a ſecret ſatisfaction in the honeſter part, and terrify the lurking villain.

Judges are always ſubmitted to in the diſcharge of their duty—Juſtices have been abuſed, and lawyers, or thoſe who have called themſelves ſuch, have been affronted — but when this happens, it is owing to the ignorance of the one, and to the knavery of the other; and certainly, to a man born under a free conſtitution, who has laws enacted to protect his perſon and property, it is infinitely more provoking to be injured in either, whether from thoſe who are appointed to defend him, or from thoſe whom he pays for their ſervice, than if he were robbed by a common highwayman—Who is there but muſt lament the neceſſity of lodging authority in ſuch hands, when he reads a warrant, iſſued to take a man dead or alive, but, if poſſible, to break a leg or an arm?—Who is there that does not feel an indignation, when he hears of a poor wretch being fined for defamation, becauſe he ridiculouſly called a country practitioner of phyſic, a horſe-doctor, at a time that he was applying the ſame medicines, to that animal, for the mange, and to the reſt of his patients for other diſorders.

Even North-Carolina, whoſe juſtices in the back parts are little regarded, and who frequently bring down upon themſelves, the contempt they deſerve; even this province, which is conſidered as the rudeſt part of the whole continent, ſubmits with pleaſure to the deciſion of their judges; nor can I recollect a ſingle inſtance of a judge being moleſted in his duty, nor a ſheriff of a county being deprived of life or limb, while he was levying executions over his diſtrict, with all the ſeverity of his office, and with a hardneſs of heart that humanity would be ſhocked at.

It is the intereſt of every man who has property to proteſt, to defend the miniſters of juſtice; and, if we have recourſe to hiſtory, we find the common people are not difficult to manage—They never fly in the face of government, they never oppoſe the execution of laws, unleſs they have undergone ſome violation, unleſs they are agitated by ſome ſudden guſt of paſſion, or have been groſsly affronted for the meanneſs of their condition—The lower rank have always been the unfortunate tools of ambitious men in overturning governments, by whiſpering in their ears, their laws were at ſtake.—They are the fondeſt of their laws; and, ſtrange as it may appear, yet it is undoubtedly true, that thoſe who have the leaſt to defend, have perpetually been the protectors of law—What apprehenſion, with juſtice, can be entertained of theſe men?—I ſhall beg leave to make one remark here, which, on my own account I think neceſſary—Far be it from me to impeach the conduct of my betters; for decency's ſake, for reaſons beſt known to myſelf, I ſhall be peculiarly cautious, how I attempt any thing of that tendency — but as every little ſociety, in town or country, will argue every matter as fully perhaps as it is debated elſewhere, and as many of them may have had tolerable information of what arguments were offered, as I only mean to expreſs the different ſentiments of the people as I have heard them made uſe of, I hope I ſhall be excuſed, ſhould I by ſome accident blunder upon them—ad populum precor.

Thoſe who diſreliſh the bill, becauſe impracticable, muſt ſhut their ears againſt all kind of information, or their underſtandings muſt, unfortunately, be enveloped in more than Greenland darkneſs—There are a ſtring of colonies, who have already adopted this meaſure, experience has not diſcovered any inconveniencies; they acknowledge its utility, and wonder, with aſtoniſhment, that this very province ſhould continue without a juriſdiction, upon which the happineſs of every individual, the happineſs of the public, and the ſecurity of the whole, intirely depends.

What has been done may be done, and I can ſee no reaſon why we may not be as ſucceſsful as our neighbours, unleſs we will allow a deficiency in our heads, an imputation I would by no means throw upon the good people of this province, for I do not believe it.

There are two paſſages very far back in the hiſtory of England, which marks out the conduct of two princes under a worſe ſituation than ourſelves, and when the inhabitants of Great-Britain were full as rude, full as illiterate, and full as looſe in their morals, as moſt of the back ſettlers.

When Edwin, one of the firſt Saxon kings, mounted the throne, he found his country co fuſed of one neſt of villains, murders and robberies were daily committed, and no man's life or property was ſafe—His firſt inquiry was among the officers who adminiſtered juſtice, and we are told he hung eleven judges for their malpractices, and chaſtiſed forty for their ignorance; in the room of theſe, he placed men of integrity and good ſenſe, for men of learning were not to be found in thoſe days, and he had the happineſs of ſeeing juſtice adminiſtered with that ſtrictneſs and impartiality, that a child might have walked in any part of his country, with a purſe of gold in its hand, without running any riſk of being deprived of it—and laws, calculated for the happineſs of a community, will always proportion a ſeverity equal to the crimes of the offenders.

The other inſtance is in the reign of Alfred. This prince made his way to the government by force, his country had been long harraſſed by civil wars, and there are times, in which enormities of all kinds are committed, becauſe of the difficulty, and almoſt impoſſibili y, of preventing them—but, as ſoon as he found himſelf in quiet poſſeſſion, he went one ſtep further than his predeceſſor, he divided his country into diſtricts, he appointed magiſtrates from among the men moſt admired for their probity; ſeverely puniſhed all malverſation in office, and removed thoſe who were unequal to the taſk.—His ſucceſs was equal to his diligence, and in a few years he hung up golden bracelets in different parts of his kingdom, to ſee if any one would dare to take them down.

Now if two princes, in ſuch rude ages, among a people little better than ſavages, who could ſcarce brook reſtrictions of any kind, were capable of taming them, and obliging them to ſubmit to the laws—what difficulty can prevent us, when the people are deſirous of relief?

All you who can throw aſide prejudices and ſelf-intereſt, you who would willingly redreſs the grievances of your fellow ſubjects, can you continue in doubt? retire one half hour to your ſtudies, turn over this prince's life, and obſerve his conduct,—labouring under every diſadvantage, his ſubjects poor and rapacious, his country involved in every calamity, yet this man became the founder of that bleſſed conſtitution which we at this day are entitled to, and which is equally envied and admired—A conſtitution not framed from the ſchemes of an inventive genius, but from the cuſtoms of the different nations on the continent, collected together, and adopted by plain good ſenſe.

I cannot help obſerving the conduct of our gentry upon moſt public occaſions—As ſoon as they hear of any beneficial ſcheme, or one that is thought ſo at leaſt, whether it is building a jail or a church, circuit courts or a college, it is no matter—every one ſees the neceſſity. Some are for jails, the beſt of us may want a comfortable apartment, others launch out in praiſe of religion and the clergy, and vow that both ought to be protected—Others again are for courts, and thoſe who have children will have a college, that we may become a race of ſcholars, and read Homer and Euclid in Greek, and Newton and Horace in Latin — but mention the expence, they ſtand aghaſt, and ſhake their heads; every ſcheme ariſes in their imaginations ſo many huge giants, ſo many perfect Goliahs, with ſpears in their hands, like weaver's beams, armed all over with ſhackles of braſs, for the little Davids of the times to pelt with pebbles.

A ſcheme may be propoſed of a pernicious tendency, accompanied with an expence more great than uſeful; but ſtrictly to adhere to parſimony, to grumble at a taxation which it would be ſhameful to avoid—to imagine the government can be ſupported with the ſame frugality as forty years back, as our ſilver-headed ſages would willingly have it, is to run counter to our intereſt, and injure the public.

As we increaſe in numbers and wealth, our expences will ariſe in proportion.—Steps neceſſary to our ſupport muſt be taken, which would have been uſeleſs to our forefathers — ſome will be attended with extraordinary charges — they ought—This very bill, if paſſed in the form moſt likely to anſwer its ends, will be one of that nature—The Judges ſhould have a tolerable ſalary, that men of capacity may be induced to accept the office; the ſame ſolemnities ſhould be obſerved as in town — the Court-Houſes ſhould be decent buildings, for mankind are as much attracted by ſhow and form, as the needle by the loadſtone—If ever a bill for courts paſſes in any other way, if a too ſtrict œconomy is obſerved, it will be a pernicious bill; it will be a ſcandalous bill; it will be big with ruin—Men, whoſe pride and vanity are ſuperior to their learning, will become judges, they will be incapable of determining cauſes with that preciſion which becomes a judge; they will have a place too elevated to expoſe their folly; they will injure the people, and render themſelves as hateful and diſguſtful as ſome juſtices of our back parts.

Our city too, it ſeems, are averſe to circuits, becauſe, it will, in ſome little meaſure, deprive them of cuſtomers, whom they would otherwiſe very ſeldom ſee, and who, by the bye, have very little to ſpend.—Strange! That a place ſhould object to any meaſure for the welfare of a province, which gives them bread, the means of amaſſing wealth, and prevents one third of them from beggary and poverty.—How muſt we deteſt that man, whoſe narrow mind is confined within ſo ſmall a compaſs as is contained within the fortifications.

I once more beg for indulgence,—let me bring the matter home to thoſe who have the power of redreſſing.—When a planter, in a certain capacity, is called to a diſcharge of his duty at an unſeaſonable time, how does he wiſh that buſineſs may be forwarded; how often does he aſk leave of abſence?—ſometimes to ſee ſick negroes becauſe there is no doctor in the neighbourhood, another a ſick child requires his preſence, a third a ſond wife, and a fourth merely to review his plantation, when under the direction of a man full as capable as himſelf.—If they find a hardſhip in being from their families, how cruel is the caſe of that man, who cannot afford to eat or drink out of his own doors, who lives from hand to mouth, and on whoſe manual labour himſelf and family depends?

How muſt we pity the ſituation of thoſe people, who heartily deſire, that a fond ſcheme of governor Dobbs ſhould take place, that the Northern part of this province ſhould be annexed to North-Carolina, that they may enjoy the ſatisfaction of having judges at their own doors?—With regard to the bill itſelf—no doubt it was examined with that attention, and debated with that ſeriouſneſs, which the nature of the ſubject muſt have commanded—No doubt objections were not only made, but amendments were likewiſe offered—no doubt many of the clauſes are faulty—but I cannot conceive them to be thoſe which are intended to amend the abſurdities of the law—A bill which alters its fundamentals, ought to be rejected with diſdain—but our conſtitution is not fixed upon ſo narrow a baſis, that inconveniences are not to be handled, for fear of injuring the whole—Certainly, the moſt bigotted Phariſee of the Long-Robe, cannot carry his love ſo far, as to hold in veneration the very droſs of the common law, and conſider it as ſacred as the gold and fringe, the ſhoulder-knot and uſeleſs images, on my lord Peter's ſuit, while the cloth itſelf is little regarded.

I will venture to affirm, that all the lawyers in the province, with his honour the chief-juſtice and aſſiſtant-judge, nay, if my lord Cooke, with a conjuror's wand, could be raiſed from the dead and added to the junto, they could not frame a bill of this nature, without ſome errors; human prudence cannot effect it—time and experience alone muſt bring it to ſome degree of perfection—For, as mankind extend their ſociety and traffic, as they find themſelves oppreſſed by poverty and want, their villainies will be increaſed and refined—An act, which anſwered its end when made, will be found deficient, and alterations will be continually wanting.

Preſinct courts have been tried, they have been repealed, and, from the number of bills to be found in the houſe, it is plain, the people have from time to time required circuits—Why, not give them a tryal?—Perfection all at once is no more to be expected, than for a child of a year old to ariſe in an inſtant to a ſtate of manhood.—And, if we vainly imagine, ſome favourable opportunity will offer itſelf; if we think, a people long inured to all kinds of violence, will at length be ſated with their wickedneſs and give over—we ſhall only act the part of the booby-countryman in Horace, who, being retarded in his journey, by the courſe of a river in which he obſerved a pretty ſtrong current, waited upon the banks, in fooliſh expectation of running itſelf dry.—Sed labitur et labetur in omne volubilis ævum, it runs and will continue running, until the day of judgment.

AS the time I have undertaken to inſpect INDICO for ſale in this town, at one per cent. expired the 25th of March paſt; it is neceſſary I ſhould acquaint the public, that it will not hereafter ſuit me to do the ſame for leſs than two dollars per hundred; and that, for ſorting, garbling and ſealing Indico, from thoſe whoſe names are not in my regiſter for the three laſt crops, I ſhall expect five per cent. on invoice, provided they ſignify their intention to employ me, before the 20th of July next, accompanied with a ten pounds bill.

If after this offer, any ſhould have reaſon to complain that their Indico, ſent home without my ſeal and certificate, is a drug there, they muſt blame themſelves for preſuming it would be otherwiſe.

At the ſame time, I would adviſe all perſons who have Indico damped or purpoſely wetted, or who jumble the 1ſt, 2d and 3d ſorts together, in order to impoſe on purchaſers, not to offer the ſame for my inſpection; as I am determined always to publiſh my opinion of ſuch parcels, with the names of the makers, or venders, in the very next gazette, to prevent its being any longer thought at home that, by my ſilence, I am the father of, or countenance, all the iniquitous practices which have been committed with Carolina indico.

MOSES LINDO, Inſpector-General of Indico.

AND, in order to remove any prejudices that may ariſe from an apprehenſion that they have bought a ſtock of old and unſaleable goods, on account of their having moved thither; they aſſure their friends, that they have taken only ſuch as are very good, and well bought, having been allowed in the purchaſe, to take only ſuch as they approved of; which, with their own ſtock, form a very good aſſortment.

And, as the ſtore has long been favoured with the friendſhip of many worthy and wealthy perſons, ſo they hope for the ſame favours being transferred to them, which has been their ſole motive for moving thither: At the ſame time, they beg the continuance of their friends cuſtom, who were pleaſed to prefer them at their other ſtore, not doubting but they have it in their power to render them perfect ſatisfaction. 6. w.
